Milky Way to Marriage

at all there) is should be pointed out that SALES UNLIMITED doesn't necessarily mean HUSBANDS UNLIMITED. Believe it or not, there are several reasons for this — but the one I will discuss first with you is the earth-shaking fact that, available as they may be, not all men make good husbands. You don't believe me? Well, I didn't expect you would so to prove my point I took the precaution of indexing all the married swains who passed through my Milk Room.

First there was the ruffling married specimen who struts boastfully in, flexing his biceps and thumping his broad chest. A superior sort was a cliché for him. Unhappily it wasn't! He gave up at the first unsuccessful twist of his wrist and slunked out of the Milk Room with his head down and his muscles sagging. The second girl, as a husband he'd say too. Next there was the scowling mauler of the scene, determined to throw that separator bowl at the first fry. Regrettably the bowl threw him — and another marriage bit hit the dust.

The third group I called the "beast over brown" school. This type tried all the angles. He twisted the bowl, banged it against the wall, and it between his knees and wrestled with it, in fact did just about everything but give it a good hard turn. This fellow would think of a thousand ways to earn a living while YOU brought home the bacon, girl!

The fourth group, and my personal choice of the brown battalion, was the modern-day mauler who did a fair amount of grunting and growling but along about the fifth try came up with a perspiring face and his separator lid in his grasp. This fellow's no quitter, girl!

The fifth . . . Unhappily my research on mauler men came to an abrupt stop at this point. I would like to say it was not about my marriage — but it was!

The fact is that the strong-willed wife of one of my erstwhile maulers came barging into the Milk Room as I awaited my next victim and she not only uncovered my separator bowl but told me that if I didn't stop playing these kind of games she'd break the darn thing over my head.

So . . . the fifth group of mauler men I must warn you — usually belong to someone else — namely wives.

And if this untimely and comes to your husband — hanging me, I can only suggest one of two further courses of action. Either go back to your typewriter — or pack your crown separator and keep looking well!

you find some unbranded mauler.

However — as to the successful outcome of this latter course — well, I can only point out that I'm still typing . . .

BACKACHE?

...not me!

For relief from backaches or that tired-out feeling I depend on — white stripes and had for its center the Union Jack containing the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew. It was, as Encyclopedia Britannica says, "modified by placing six white stripes on the red field." At that date, the colonists were not planning independence, and this flag expressed loyalty to the crown. It continued to be used even after independence was declared in 1776, making the Union Jack the last flag of the British Empire. The design that officially replaced the British symbol, which by then had become one of harshest opposition, with the stars of today's Stars and Stripes.

Canada adopted the Red Ensign with the dominion badge for its merchantmen in 1859, just 25 years after Confederation. The arms of the four provinces that united in 1867 formed a Great Seal of the Dominion. The vice was never used for that purpose, but it began to appear as an emblem on flags then in use, including the merchant-ship's Red Ensign, and on such public monuments as memorials.

If the arms of other provinces had been added as they entered the Confederation, this coat of arms would have become unwieldy and homely in appearance. The present arms, which date from a royal proclamation of George V issued November 21, 1917, include a shield containing the traditional emblems of the four provinces. The shield is set on a red field, Scotland's national color, and is surrounded by a gold wreath, a symbol of peace.

It also contains the emblem of France (three golden fleurs-de-lis on a blue field), that is, the corporation the one French flag that and finally flew over Canada. It is the flag that still flies here. Below it is a scroll of these words: "EUREKA".

From its use on merchant ships, the Canadian Red Ensign moved, with widespread international recognition, to the position of our flag abroad, superseding the Union Jack. This was written into law in 1924 when Parliament enacted legislation providing for the wearing of the ensign on any Canadian building abroad.

The ensign is the flag carried by Canadian teams in the Olympic Games, and it is the flag worn by our troops in Cyprus to show nationality, though that force is fighting under the United Nations flag, not Canada's.

At home, the ensign is the national flag by authority of an order-in-council dated Sept. 3, 1945. This order says it is appropriate to fly the ensign on any occasion when it is desired to mark its Canadian significance.

Canada is coming by its national flag as it has come by so much of its unique nationality: slowly and gradually, by evolution rather than by sudden revolution. From time to time individuals make attempts to hasten the process, usually in the form of private member's bills to clarify the status of the national flag. The most recent such bill was introduced a month ago by N. Ominion, Progressive Conservative MP for Melville, Sask. None of these bills has been enacted, and almost 20 years later the legal situation is still as it was set down by the 1945 Order in Council.

homicide King (Kingsmill) quoted the Canadian flag and the Union Jack flying side by side to the ground. This I arranged yesterday, I had been put out when I saw the Union Jack and Canadian flag flying one beneath the other on the Canadian flag.

'Open Grave' producer
Shut Down in 'Good Life'

Shut Down Canadian Week

The CBC has been barred the latest of Producer Ron 'Open Grave' Kelly.

Kelly's latest was 'The Good Life', a four-part series. It traced the laborious creation of a new document—a real-life profile of a national—by a team of writers.

National Program Director Doug Nixon and three other CBC executives at down last week to watch the finished tape. An hour later they named La Nov 'The Good Life'.

White-Director Kelly was more articulate. He (Nixon) said that on one hand, there was a danger of the manufacture of a new document, the CBC's, because of the wide appeal of the show. On the other hand, if the show was to be a success, it had to be a success on all levels of the free press.

The CBC management fumbled around with that one for a while, finally came up with a decision, pointed out that Kelly's show was scheduled for the non-sponsored series, 'Camera Canada'.

But did the management deal with in 'The Good Life' pay for any other CBC show? 'Yes'.

DOT'S

Having grown up in a town only 50 miles from the town of Calgary, I am familiar with the town of Calgary. I am familiar with the town of Calgary. I am familiar with the town of Calgary.

DOT'S

Drayton Valley will surely feel the loss of its reality tree, but hear let's take a look at the end of June to live in Calgary.

Registered Stallion Shot

A registered Hunter Stallion, named Tiny, of the M. Latoky farm, Tuxedo Park, just south of Drayton Valley, was shot recently. The horse had been purchased originally from the Lord and Lady Gordon Farm at Bentley. He was four years old, and weighed about 900 pounds. His value is estimated to have been about $350. It is thought that he may have been deliberately shot, although there is a possibility that it was accidental. Even if accidental, it was certainly the work of a very irresponsible person. Mr. Latoky has offered a substantial reward to information leading to the arrest and conviction of the party or parties that were guilty. It is quite certain that careless use of guns, and deliberate shooting deserve punishment, and it is to be hoped that the guilty will be apprehended and punished.

Soapbox Derby

Our local entry in the Active Club of Edmonton Soapbox Derby was Larry Smith, in a race built by himself and Dan Kenney.

Sponsor for their entry was Stevenson Hardware.

Larry didn't win, but managed to make a very good showing.

From reports we hear the boys are already contemplating building another car to enter in the Calgary Derby on Labour Day.

Good luck, boys....

DOTS & JOTS
possess a "pomme de terre", what happens when a French Canadian speaking the language at breakneck speed, call it a "potato"??

It seems it is not just a question of whether French will be taught, but also what kind of French. And if you don't think it makes any difference, just ask any one from France if he had any difficulty with the language upon arrival in Montreal.

Not only in the French language can there be some confusion as to the true meaning — To say a woman looks like a million dollars is a flattering phrase. However, it tends to lose something in the translation to British parlance — when she looks like a million pounds?!

And say it in any language — there is a Fair Board Meeting at 8:30 p.m. Thursday, June 11, at the Town Hall. See you there....

Sitting In The Anxious Seat

Sitting in the anxious seat is Mrs. George VanEmmet and her daughter Mrs. Berdine Leitz, of the Berrymore district. On May 23rd they bought a ticket at Block's store in Drayton Valley and one week later they had a wild game bingo. But, there have also been two other bingos on the same Drayton Valley Lion Club Bingo, one in Calgary and one in Cowley and the two Berrymore Ladies are anxiously waiting the payoff which is scheduled to take place on June

THE Editor's Viewpoint

In Edmonton over the past week-end we saw "Tom Jones" and as we watched we thought of all the fuss over its premiere in Alberta and thought "what a senseless waste of money." We were fascinated by the photography and the setting of the movie which was purely British produced, with no Hollywood accent.

Of course, Tom was shown in his best light, more than once with a female in the same scene of debauchery, but that probably was too much for most of the average show. We wouldn't know since we are not a regular show-goer. Of course in the Never-Never land of movie certain most impossible situations were brought up and in the kind of reality, probably these same conditions would never exist. The plot was involved and extremely hard to follow, but forgetting all that, the photography and the background settings were superb.

A student of history we could not help but be impressed by the fine hand account of 17th and 18th century British history. Knowing, as we do, that this people perhaps, unknown to themselves, or at least only dimly recognized by themselves, have a history running back, unbroken, generation after generation, for thousands upon thousands of years. We watched, fascinated, the unfolding of these histories.

So, Tom Jones has been portrayed ed on the silver screen, and having seen it we can only say that it was far less offensive to the moral taste than the majority of the magazine now being displayed on the news stands, and we can only add so, our Scored Government would surely at a national and national level and in comparison we would say that, look for more in these columns for liquor advertising and our newsstand 11th.

'Temporary' Tower Up 75 Years

Exactly seventy-five springs ago, a temporary structure was completed for the Paris Exposition of 1889. Its designer, Gustave Eiffel, and an athletic group of top-hatted officials struggled up its 1,800 steps to plant the French flag atop what was then the world's tallest structure.

Engineers said the Eiffel Tower certainly would fall. But the "temporary" 1,054-foot spire remains so sturdy that only a few of its 18,039 steel sections have ever been replaced.

The Eiffel Tower, now a cherished French landmark, was not always so loved, the National Geographic Society says.

As the steel skeleton rose above the Paris skyline in 1887, prominent Parisians petitioned against the "monstrous and useless" thing. Writer Guy de Maupassant left Paris and urged the populace to "smash this assemblage of iron ladders." Local artistic critics attacked the tower as a vandal for spires, magnet for lightning, and threat to migrating birds.

Despite the protests, 300 workmen drove 2½ million rivets and finished the framework in two years. M. Eiffel's folly swiftly proved

This Week's Cover Picture

This is the time of year to complete your vacation plans. What could be nicer than this spot pictured on our cover this week? Roaring white water, the cool, clean air filled with the fragrance of pine, breath-taking mountain views and plenty of room are all available a few steps off a splendid highway in the Alberta Rockies. This scene at Athabasca Falls is just one of many you will meet on the drive from Jasper Park to the Columbia Ice Field. It is no wonder that world-travellers wonder why Albertans ever bother to leave their province.

Canadian Eskimo Goes Modern

The igloo has almost vanished from the western Canadian Arctic. The kayak is no longer used. Eskimo children are losing their languages and native culture.

On Banks Island, a TV dinner was served to Justice William O. Douglas, who reported on changing life in the Far North in the May issue of National Geographic.

He visited Eskimo friends at Sachs Harbour, which is one of the northernmost communities in the world. It is the only settlement on Banks Island, a wind-whipped land mass about the size of West Virginia. The temperature sometimes plummets to 50 degrees below zero in winter. No trees grow except scrub willow.

CARPETED WITH FLOWERS

"To the newcomer, Banks Island seems bald and barren," Mr. Douglas says. "Yet it becomes a pleasant land when the May melt starts. Normally by July the bays are free of ice and the land is ablaze with arctic flowers."

Summer is an especially happy time, because the children come home from school at lunch on the Canadian mainland. Their instruction is entirely in English, since none of the teachers can speak Eskimo or the different languages of Loucheux, Hare, and Slave Indian pupils.

Most of the 20 families at Sachs Harbour speak some English," Justice Douglas reports. "Every family has a radio—some have short-wave sets as well as sets of regular frequency. The radio brings English-speaking programs from Canada and the United States, the shorewards greet the Eskimo in touch with programs all over the world. Masov and Peking both speak in English to the people of Sachs Harbour.

"I was surprised to find that, as a consequence of radio, even the Eskimo on Banks Island was thinking profoundly on many aspects of international affairs."

Every Sachs Harbour Eskimo has a yen for modernity. Half a dozen families have movie cameras, and a few take movies. Their 16-mm color films reflect their main preoccupations—dogs, children, hunting.

Despite movie cameras, radios, and TV dinners, life on Banks Island has its primitive aspects. In an otherwise modern kitchen there is no tap water, because wells cannot be driven through the permafrost. Housewives melt ice on the stove for winter household needs.

SUSIE SHOT MORE CARIBOU

The main diet is caribou, seal, and arctic hare, supplemented by fish, ptarmigan, and an occasional pump fox caught in a trap.

Women are not subservient in Eskimo society, Mr. Douglas says, though the theme of male supremacy is dominant and the division of labor remains conspicuous. Women must perform the less pleasant tasks such as cleaning white fox fur and fishing seal and polar bear skins.

One of Sachs Harbour's most indomitable personalities is a woman, Susie Tikalik, a widow on the far side of 60. During one year, Susie shot more caribou than any man. Threatened by four polar bears when she had no guns, Susie scared them off by brandishing her seal boots.

"Sachs Harbour has a powerful attraction for those who enjoy living off the land," Justice Douglas says. "There is a spirit of independence and individuality... there are no unemployment lines, and Sachs Harbour does not tolerate a drone."

The Western Farm Scene

'Acorn' Planted 80 Years Ago Develops Into A Mighty 'Oak'

By Grant MacEwan

Today's internationally famous Calgary Exhibition and Stampede is like a "mighty oak" which grew from an acorn planted exactly 80 years ago. Growth was not without interruptions but it was spectacular and worthy of study.

The first talk of a fair was in 1884—same year which saw Calgary incorporated as a town. Nine years earlier, Mounted Police rode into the Bow River Valley and selected the site for a fort but nobody at that time was thinking of anything more than an outpost for law enforcement.

Settlers came, however, and then the rails. On August 18, 1884, still a few months ahead of town incorporation, the relatively new weekly newspaper, described as Calgary Herald, Mining and Ranch Advocate and Adviser, proposed an Agricultural Society and Fair.

"Now that the harvest season is near at hand," the editor wrote, "would it not be well if our farmers, cattlemen and merchants joined hands and exerted themselves in getting up an agricultural exhibition of the products of Alberta? Last year the specimens of grains grown in this district were sent to Eastern cities and they compared most favorably with the cereals grown in the choice agricultural districts there... No amount of writing or verbal testimony can convince as readily as the exhibition of our produce... After the exhibition here, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, we are convinced, could be induced to give easy rates for the transportation of a carload to the Toronto and other Ontario Exhibitions. Such steps would be a death stroke to the misrepresentation and do much to encourage immigration and the influx of capital. We trust those who take an interest in the future of our town and district will take immediate steps to form an Agricultural Society."

STARTS WITH $200 GRANT

The idea was immediately popular and a meeting was called for August 16. At R. J. D. Goddes, Member of the Council of the North West Territories, announced a grant of $200 if an agricultural society were formed. Nothing more was needed; J. G. Fitzgerald was on his feet, moving formally that such a society be organized. The motion was seconded and passed and all present agreed to hold another meeting six days later for the purpose of "enrolling members and electing directors as well as to consider an exhibition." Membership fees were to be one dollar each.

At the meeting on August 22, some 50 members enrolled and Augustus Carney who homesteaded on land which became Union Cemetery, was elected president. The new society didn't succeed in holding the proposed fair in that first year but it did send an exhibit to Eastern Canadian Exhibitions and Secretary Fitzgerald accompanied to tell Ontario people of the good country lying close to the Rockies.

In other respects, progress was being made. As it happened, the Deputy Minister of the Interior from Ottawa was visiting at Calgary and, while inspecting land beside Fish Creek, the horse he was riding indulged in a bit of bucking and threw the Ottawa man. The double result was a fractured collar bone and a very dejected Deputy Minister. But Major James Walker, formerly of the North West Mounted Police, like the Good Samaritan of old, came that way, found the injured man and took him home.

Naturally the Civil Servant felt a strong debt of gratitude to his benefactor and when James Walker mentioned the Agricultural Society's need for a certain parcel of Federal Government land beside the Elbow River, the Deputy Minister couldn't decently do less than promise to help in obtaining the land for the purpose. The happy result was that the Calgary Agricultural Society bought 94 acres—still the home of Calgary Exhibition and Stampede—from the Government at $2.50 per acre, subject to a guarantee that the property would never be subdivided for town lots.

MISSED IN REBELLION YEAR

Nor was there a fair in 1885—Rebellion Year in the West—but early in 1886, the reorganized Society, with James Walker as president, announced determination to hold a fair that year. The dates chosen were October 19 and 20 and the place was to be Claxton's Star Rink for inside exhibits and the surrounding open space for livestock and machinery. A $900 premium list was prepared with cash grants totalling $800.

Came the day of the fair. Roads were bad and livestock entries were light. But other things were abundant. Major Walker and Leo Gaetz were the big winners with vegetables and grains. There was a band in attendance and the president made a speech. The exact attendance wasn't established because there was no fence around the grounds and not all the visitors entered by way of the ticket sellers.

And to make the fair complete, there was a class for babies—any sex, any size, any color. The entry wasn't big but quality was said to be high. The problem came with the judging because nobody wanted the dangerous assignment, knowing that no mother or father would politely take less than a first prize for an offspring.

As told by an editor of that time, the two judges, seeing fathers of the contesting babies walking around with six-shooters dangling from their belts, decided, very wisely, that the only way to avoid bloodshed was to award a first prize to every baby. Directors co-operated. There being no entries in the sheep classes, the sagacious directors authorized a transfer of prize ribbons and prize money from sheep to babies. Then, with every baby receiving a red ribbon and every parent getting prize money, there was no shooting and the judges were congratulated for their skill.

Calgary's first fair ended at 4 o'clock on the second day because the building had been booked for a political meeting and nothing at that time rated more importance.

The fair became an annual event although there were reverses as well as successes. At one point, the Calgary grounds were seized and sold by creditors, then to be bought back by the city a few years later.

In any case, the modest beginning 80 years ago bears striking contrast to the proud Exhibition and Stampede of 1964 to which close to 600,000 people from many sections of the North American Continent are likely to flock.

Fresh Strawberry Shortcake

Do you know how strawberries got their name? In the 15th century, they were brought to markets strong on stress... naturally, they were called strawberries.

For post-of-season popularity, it's hard to outshine a light-brown strawberry shortcake! First, bake the "Magic" way. Add heaps of fresh, sweet strawberries. Top with lots of thick, whipped cream.

Magic Baking Powder ensures you perfect results whenever and wherever you bake. It's a tradition with all good cooks. Bake it with Magic — Serve it with Pride!

Individual Strawberry Shortcakes

2 cups once-sifted pastry flour or 1 1/2 cups once-sifted all-purpose flour
1/2 cup chilled whipping cream
3/4 tsp. Magic Baking Powder
1/2 tsp. salt
1/2 cup granulated sugar
1 egg, well beaten
Soft butter or Blue Bonnet Margarine
Milk
Sweetened sliced strawberries
Lightly-sweetened whipped cream
6 whole strawberries

Grease a cookie sheet. Preheat oven to 400° (hot). Mix, sift twice, then sift into a bowl, flour, Magic Baking Powder, salt, nutmeg, and sugar. Cut in shortening, flaky. Combine well-beaten egg and 1/4 cup milk. Make a well in flour mixture and add liquid, mix lightly with a fork, adding a little more milk. If necessary to make a stiff dough that is a little stiffer than a plain biscuit dough. Knead for 10 seconds on lightly-floured baking board; pat or roll out to 1/4-inch thickness; cut with floured 2 1/2-inch round cookie cutter. Arrange, well spaced, on prepared cookie sheet; brush with milk. Bake in preheated oven 14 to 16 minutes. Split hot shortcakes and spread with butter or margarine; arrange bottom halves on individual serving plates, pile with sweetened sliced strawberries; cover with top halves of shortcakes. Top each with a spoonful of whipped cream — with more fruit and cream — and add a whole berry. Yield: 6 shortcakes.

TABLE TOP

Fruit Crepes are extremely thin, tender, delicate, palatable. A sprinkling of fruit — crushed pineapple, raisins or crushed apple — baked into the egg-rich batter. The Crepes can be served warm with a sprinkling of sugar and lemon juice to enhance the appealing flavor and taste; or contrast of the hot fruit and the "cold" sauce. They make a nice dessert for spring-into-summer luncheons. The hostess can arrange the fruit attractively "at the ready" and cook the crepes in front of her guests, using an electric skillet. Fruit Crepes will be a hit at the teachers' "Pancake Party"; they're a good idea, too, for families that make an occasion of Sunday Brunch.

FRUIT CREPES

(Yields about 12)
1 cup once-sifted all-purpose flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 tablespoons granulated sugar, 1 cup milk, 2 eggs, unbeaten. Prepared fruit — well-drained, canned crushed pineapple, seedless raisins and/or chopped apple. Into medium bowl, sift together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Add milk, beat with rotary beater or mixer until smooth. Add unbeaten eggs; continue to beat until well blended and smooth. Lightly grease, and heat, heavy frying pan. Carefully pour in batter, 2 to 3 tablespoons at a time, to make a thin layer of batter for each crepe. Sprinkle each with one tablespoon fruit. Turn when bubbles have formed and edges of crepes are dry on top. Cook until golden. Repeat with rest of batter. If desired, keep cooked crepes warm until all are done, by placing between tea towels, on cookie sheet, in a slow oven, 200 deg. F.). Serve crepes hot, plain, or with lemon wedges and granulated sugar, or with syrup.

BUILD YOUR OWN DESSERT

Prepared cake mixes are delicious and no homemaker should ever feel that an apology is in order because the uses them. After all, expert cake bakers have usually helped devise and perfect them and the very best ingredients are used in these mixes. However, it is fun to add your variations to make the cake truly your own. Blue-B-Dessert is an example of a delightful cake dessert that takes very little time to make and every time for the family to eat. Use your own homegrown cherries or the frozen, sweetened (Continued on Page Seven)

Healing Substance In Preparation H Shrinks Piles

Research shows that Preparation H shrinks piles and relieves discomfort. A new research, Institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissue.

In men after men, while gently relieving pain, actual reduction (shrinkage) took place. Most important of all — results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Blue-Drye) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue.

Now Blue-Drye is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H. Ask for it at all drug stores — money back guarantee.
